

Abstract

A method for monitoring quality of a weld (56) being formed between first and second pieces of material (10 and 12) includes the steps of obtaining a thermal image of the weld (56) being formed by collecting infrared radiation passing through the second piece of material (12); and analyzing the obtained thermal image for characteristics indicative of a properly formed weld (56).